

Irene P. Vekris

Irene P. Vekris born in Mytilene of Lesvos, prides of her Asia Minor origins, which made her get seriously into historic research and novel writing. She is married to Paraskevas Vekris from Amorgos.

She has studied Industrial Engineering and Information Systems in the U.S.A., a long time ago, and creative writing and scenario, more recently. Currently she is a graduate student in Modern Greek History, of the Hellenic Open University. After her retirement as Director of Data Processing Dept. of Hydrographic Service, Hellenic Navy, she has written four books, participated in about a dozen collective writers' publications and won prizes in Literature contests.

She is very proud of her daughter, two sons and three grandchildren, and feels blessed for the two beautiful islands Lesvos and Amorgos she can call home.
