

Niovi Anazikou

Journalist | Documentary Filmmaker

Niovi Anazikou is a journalist, documentary producer, and director who focuses on research and the visibility of social stories.

She holds degrees in Accounting and Journalism, and a master's degree in "Culture and Documentary Production" from the Department of Cultural Informatics and Communication at the University of the Aegean.

She worked at VICE Greece for nine years, pioneering the creation of a video category for the visibility of gender-based violence. Currently, she works at ERTNews on the investigative show "FASMA" while also teaching Documentary and Film Production at recognized vocational training institutes (IEK).

She has produced and directed dozens of short and feature-length documentaries and documentary series, some of which have been awarded. Finally, she collaborates with recognized NGOs to create campaign videos for human rights aimed at raising public awareness.