I think it's a common belief that we undergo an extremely difficult historical period the international community being in constant unrest in search of balance and solutions but finally being unable to launch important essential agendas and reliable, viable breakthrough of impasse.

Globalization, the new element in economic life of states, produced changes and nations try to assimilate the positive and to expel negative elements.

Internet brought a revolution in communication abolishing borders, uniting people all over the world as it has never happened before. Huge trusts that were consolidated of the merging of small firms resulted in the appearing
